

GETTING CONNECTED GUIDE

Now that you have begun engaging internally with your leadership, staff and current veterans, it is time to start looking into your community and your co-op neighbors for support and collaboration. The purpose of this Getting Connected Guide is to help you build your network of supporters and to collaborate with organizations that can help you successfully attract, hire and retain your veterans and military spouses.

Step	Description	Action
1	Connect with your state level co-op veteran working group. If your state has a co-op veteran working group reach out to participate. Otherwise, collaborate with other co-ops from your state and start a working group.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Connect with the co-ops in your state to collaborate on employing and honoring veterans. If other co-ops in your state are participating in Serve our Co-ops; Serve our Country, follow steps 2 – 5 as a group to leverage the power and commitment of the coalition. If not, follow steps 2 – 5 and then encourage your neighboring co-ops to participate.
2	Talk to your Local Universities, Community and Technical Colleges. Share your interest and commitment in hiring veterans and ask how you can partner with them.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Promote our commitment to veteran employment at their career centers. Discuss opportunities to leverage the G.I. Bill benefits to attract veterans to participate in training programs, on-the-job training (OJT), or apprenticeships to prepare them for the utility industry. Connect with Student Veteran Chapters and Yellow Ribbon Programs. Support their events, talk about your co-op and the national network of 900+ co-ops. Attend career fairs on behalf of your co-op and the national network of 900+ co-ops.
